

Public Health Farmers' Market

Purpose

The College of Public Health partners annually with Columbus Public Health to offer a farmers' market in downtown Columbus. The market is held one day a week for three weeks at Columbus Public Health.

Ohio farmers offer fresh fruits and vegetables, providing nutritious food options to residents of areas known for having limited access to grocery stores.

Impact

Volunteer assistance made it possible to serve 5,889 people in 2013, issue 3,824 WIC vouchers, and provide $1,965 in fresh produce to 139 Ohio Direction Card customers.

33 volunteers donated over 140 hours of time to the 2013 farmer's market.

17 local farms participated in the 2013 farmers market.

Ohio State Colleges/Units Involved
College of Public Health

Community Partners Involved
Columbus Public Health

Farmers' Market development Fund
#313292

Contact

Phylis Pirie, Ph.D.
College of Public Health
Interim Associate Dean for Research
Chair & Professor, Health Behavior and Health Promotion
ppirie@cph.osu.edu
<http://go.osu.edu/cphfarmersmarket>

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

